dministration Suffers Complete Defeat on Spending-Lending Bill

The Administration Spending-Lending bill came to a sudden, unexpected end Tuesday when the House voted against consideration of the measure. The margin of defeat was decisive as 47 Democrats joined with 146 Republicans in killing the bill by a vote of 193 to 166. There were 32 M. C's paired in the voting.

The surprise came after the Senate had pared the version introduced in the upper chamber from the $3,060,000,000 asked by the President to $1,615,000,000. Congress reasserted its independence when the majority of the leaders moved the bill for debate, the 47 Democrats joining with their colleagues across the aisle in promptly voting not even to consider the bill.

President Roosevelt accepted the defeat from the hands of a Congress overwhelmingly Democratic without outward show of anger. But he indicated he would take the issue to the people later in the year, telling a conference of press representatives Congress would cost the taxpayers hundreds of millions instead of saving money as the economy minded legislators claim. Having suffered several previous defeats from Congress this session in the neutrality bill, the deficiency relief measure and rejections of appointments, the chief executive has almost entirely lost control of the legislative machinery he conrolled so completely up to January, 1937. Leaders in Congress look to an early adjournment date.

Hadlock Girls Burned in Fire—Explosion Cause

The bravery of two little girls saved their lives here Saturday when a kitchen stove exploded on the Enos Hadlock farm, Mount Ppleasant and partially destroyed the house. Leona, 6 and Betty Hadlock, 8, were in a downstairs bedroom about 6 o'clock when their mother, Mrs. Harlow Hadlock, started to light some wood in a kitchen stove.

The blast broke many of the windows in the house. It is believed that gasoline fumes in the kitchen caused the blast. A can had been placed ready for Mr. Hadlock to take to Addison to get gasoline for a gasoline operated washing machine.

An uncle of the two young girls crawled out on a roof of an adjoining room while the two girls were running through the flames to get to the open air. Both girls were slightly burned in their dash for freedom.

The fire loss is estimated at about $1,000 which is covered by insurance. Mr. and Mrs. Hadlock are remaining at the house making repairs and their daughters are living in Addison.

A bucket brigade of neighbors, plus some salt brine which had been used in making ice cream, helped quell the blaze.

M. O. Hickman, general manager for the American Oil Company in this territory announced Wednesday that he has received the resignation of Earle P. Leavenworth as manager of the Addison station of the American Oil Company for the sale of Amoco gas and oil products.

Mr. Leavenworth states that his new duties did not give him much time for caring for the interests of the company in Addison and vicinity and hence he asks to be relieved of the responsibility of the local managership.

This station was opened a year ago under Mr. Leavenworth's direction and he has continued as manager since that time. The company retails gasoline, oil, household products and motor supplies. In addition the station is equipped to service cars in washing, greasing and oil changing service.

Gas Company Reduces Rate For Addison

Gas users of Addison will rejoice at the company's decision to reduce gas rates for this community. A request for the reduction was filed by the company with the Public Service Commission.

Those using the minimum of 1,000 feet at the 88 cent rate will not be affected, but all those using over 1,000 feet will save money. The 1,000 to 4,000 feet users will save 15 cents on each 1,000 above the first 1,000. Those using over 4,000 cubic feet with a total net bill of $3.28 or more will save a flat 45 cents per month or $5.40 per year if they use over 4,000 feet per month.

[illegible] campaign conducted [illegible] various officials, private citizens and organizations has been undertaken to get the rate reduced, the feeling being that in the heart of the gas well district, the rate should be cheaper than the rate which has been prevalent.

The new rate will become effective September 1. The company's movement, made by Henry G. Hubbard, vice president and general manager comes as a complete surprise at this time. A public hearing on the rates was held some time ago and the Public Service Commission now has the results of that rate hearing but has given no decision.

The new schedule of rates will have to be approved by the commission. South Corning, Corning and Caton will also benefit.

KEEPING YOUR HEAD

Last week everyone who reads newspapers was thrilled by the story of Donn Fendler, the Boy Scout from Rye, N. Y., who saved himself from a wilderness grave by keeping his head. It is true the lad followed some simple rules taught in boy scouting, but the factor which contributed most to his self-deliverance was the latent ability to cope with an emergency which has many times overtaxed older, more experienced persons.

Donn became separated from his father and twin brother in a cloud which enveloped the top of Mile high Mt. Katahdin. Unable to recontact his relatives the lad aimlessly wandered about, falling into a hole and clambering out again only to become more confused than ever. He lost all track of time as night followed day with succeeding forlorness while the berries growing on the mountainside kept starvation from the small body. A burlap sack found in the woods helped protect Don's cut and scratched body when his clothes were nearly torn away and a bedspread taken from an abandoned cabin served as a blanket at night. At last he came to a stream which he followed until he came to a telephone line, and the latter led him to the bank of the Penobscot River and a friendly camp owner.

Thus did the Boy Scout reach safety by means of courage, perseverance and attention to the rudimentary woodcraft he had been taught. His course of action was just the opposite from that of a man who died a few days earlier on our big American desert.

This man was driving his car along the desert trail when something happened to the machine. Impatient to secure help the man started on afoot across the burning sand. The heat of the desert and the exertion led him off the trail, or perhaps a mirage tempted him to strike off across country. In any event rescuers found his trail in the sand, zig zagging along from sand hill to sand hill and finally they found his body beside a hole he had scooped in the sand in a vain attempt to dig to water. Beside the wanderer lay an empty canteen and a half-mile beyond, over the next sand dune was a waterhole.

Had the man remained quietly in the car husbanding his strength and the supply of water, his life might have been spared.

The two incidents, one ending happily after an eight-day search, the other tragically, exemplify the difference in temperament which characterize two individuals. One expects a certain amount of calm deliberation in adults, but the one cited was impetuous unto his own undoing. We expect youths to easily lose their heads, but Donn Fendler stuck doggedly to his determination to get out of the woods until he succeeded.

Both incidents are rare, indeed. Yet the underlying characteristics which contributed to one happy ending and one tragic death are things which contribute to nearly everyone's happiness or downfall. Do we stop to think, when forced by emergency? Or do we blunder along on the first idea which pops into our head? Do we allow our judgment to fly after our bad temper at every real or fancied grievance? Or do we conquer our impulses with a little calm deliberation which may bring clearer light on any subject.

Few persons ever encounter an emergency such as being lost in the forest or upon the desert. But everyone does at some time in life come face to face with emergencies which have a major importance to their well-being and the well-being of others. If we meet the small emergencies of life with unruffled judgment we shall be likely to meet the major emergencies in an attitude of mind which will spare us from disaster.

THE RAIN CAME

We have just been treated to a million dollar rain. Out of the clouds, which for weeks passed overhead with nary a descending drop, there has poured shower after shower of life-giving water that has inestimable value to everyone in the vicinity.

The farmers' oats are close to a failure and wheat has been badly injured as well as hay. Pastures had almost ceased to provide food for cows in the southern tier, and corn was beginning to suffer. But in most fields corn will be saved by the soaking rain, while buckwheat, potatoes, beans and a number of catch crops should help to bring needed grain and feed. Pastures may recover for early fall feed if the rains continue, making for better milk production through the rest of the season when cattle seek their living out doors.

Various estimates were made of the damage done by the drouth through the spring and fall. Some of these placed the loss at five or six million dollars, but of course these are estimates and no one can tell exactly. It is bad enough in any event and goes to show that farmers are to an extent dependent upon caprices of weather to determine their welfare.

This is not entirely true, however. If one took the trouble to drive through the countryside during the dry weather with open eyes he must certainly have noticed some things. Farm management contributed almost as much as the weather to the good or poor crops seen. An example that could be cited was a field of corn between Corning and Addison. This field is so gravelly it might be expected nothing would grow there in a dry summer, but strangely enough the corn did not appear to be affected until the last few days before rain came. It will recover in time to produce a good crop. Doubtless the owner saved his crop by holding the moisture in the ground with cultivation, while other fields of corn in the vicinity practically burned up in the hot weather.

CORRECTING THE YARDSTICK

The action of a Senate-House conference committee in imposing definite restrictions on the TVA's money-raising authority, has been described as a victory for the utility industry, which has long contended that this is a necessary step in correcting the gross inequalities of subsidized government competition. Beyond that, however, the Senate-House decision is a victory for sound and fair government—and for the distressed taxpayer.

The committee approved a measure permitting the TVA to issue securities up to $61,500,000. And then it earmarked all of the funds and limited the territory in which they may be spent. No money can be used to make new purchases of existing power facilities. In the opinion of Representative May, this system of earmarking "should end the present duplication of transmission facilities by the TVA in Mississippi and elsewhere".

So far so good. And the same principle should now govern the other government hydro projects which are completed or still in the process of building. In the Northwest, for instance, a definite threat exists that tax-paid-for transmission lines emanating from Grand Coulee and Bonneville dams, will almost exactly duplicate existing transmission lines of the private utilities in the region. That is true in other states, where the government has also gone needlessly into the power business. This is largely responsible for the lack of new construction by the private industry—at the expense of productive investment and private employment.

If the advocates of socialized power had had their way, they would have given their pet projects unlimited funds and authority to put or destroy private properties. Congress has done its duty by turning thumbs down on such proposals. It's high time to lay down a fair and definite policy for all the government projects.

DO WE WANT DEMOCRACY?

"If we want democracy we cannot dispose of our responsibilities by marching to the polls once in a while and giving lip service to the Bill of Rights", writes Carl Dreher in Harper's. "If we want democracy we have to work at it. We have to accept the ideas of politics as every citizen's primary and unremitting concern, as our business in a very concrete and personal sense".

We have left politics to the politicians—and what a mess has resulted! We have regarded government as something in which we have no direct interest, and the consequence has been a steady extension of bureaucratic power at the expense of us all. We've worked on the principle of "Let George do it"—and George has done us in, good and plenty!

Not until we all realize that government is our business, will we have the fair, efficient and economical government that is essential to democracy.

GET READY NOW

It isn't pleasant to think of winter while enjoying the warm days of summer. But summer is the time when your home should be prepared against the cold and rainy period ahead, in the interest of comfort and fire prevention.

Check up on your heating plant first of all. Furnaces and chimneys should be thoroughly cleaned, and necessary repairs made by a qualified expert. Likewise, clean out the fuel bin and when you stock it arrange your fuel in an orderly manner. Papers or rags mixed in with the wood or coal may result in spontaneous heating.

It is very possible that certain minor changes in construction in your home are advisable as an aid to fire prevention. Wood beams extending into chimney walls, for instance, have started many fires. And adequate fire stops are all-important.

Check over any exposed electric wiring—dark days bring maximum demand for light, and heavy use of electric heating appliances. Don't make amateur repairs yourself—bad wiring may cause many a serious fire. Your electrician will do it properly, and what little he charges is insignificant in the light of the fact it may save your home from destruction.

Fnally, go through the house thoroughly, and clean out accumulations of paper, magazines, discarded clothes and other inflammable junk.

Get ready for winter now. It's a little job and pays big dividends.

This Week in Washington

Washington, August 1, (Autocaster)—The first session of the 76th Congress draws to its close with no patching up of the rift in the Democratic party.

Because of this rift, the President has lost major engagements in the struggle between himself and the Legislative branch.

Perhaps the most important act of Congress, in the last fortnight of the session, was the passage of a bill introduced by Senator Carl A. Hatch of New Mexico to prevent federal workers, including WPA workers and others on relief, to take part in party politics. After it had been amended on the floor of the House and the Senate had concurred in its amendments and sent the bill to the White House for the President's signature, it made it illegal for any official or employee of the Government to take any part whatever in party politics, under penalty of $1,000 fine. Only the President, the Vice-President, Senators, Members of Congress, and officials whose position makes them responsible for formulating national and international policies — otherwise, the Cabinet—are exempt from the operation of this new law.

The net effect, if the Hatch Act is enforced, will be to keep all Federal office-holders from taking part in next Spring's primaries to choose delegates to the Presidential nominating conventions of either party, or from being delegates themselves to any party convention. That is calculated to destroy the ancient system whereby Presidents in office are renominated by conventions largely composed of office-holders.

Eighty-three Democrats joined the solid Republican bloc in the House to carry the Hatch bill by a vote of 242 to 133.

Passed 242 to 133

After the final passage of the Hatch bill by the Senate, forty or fifty Southern Democratic Senators crowded to the Vice-President's rostrum to congratulate him and Senator Hatch, the author of the bill. Vice-President Garner beamed his appreciation; for the new law gives him a greatly improved chance of getting delegates elected who will stand for him for the Presidential nomination.

The Garner Presidential boom is now fairly launched.

The second major piece of legislation in the closing weeks of the session was the adoption by the House of a resolution proposed by Representative Cox of Georgia, for the appointment of a special Congressional committee to sit during the recess and investigate the administration of the Wagner Labor Relations Act. Here, again, 104 Democrats, mostly from the South, voted with the Republicans to carry the resolution by a vote of 254 to 134.

The ground for this investigation is the charge, frequently made not only by employers but by the American Federation of Labor, that the Labor Relations Board has refused employers a hearing in labor disputes, and has discriminated against the A. F. of L. and other labor unions in favor of the CIO.

Simultaneously with this action by the House, the Senate passed the Logan bill providing for the judicial review by the courts of all administrative rules, decisions and orders made by any branch or instrumentality of the Executive arm of Government. This is aimed not only at the Labor Relations Board but at all other agencies.

Conference Fails

The most severe blow to the President's aims was the failure of his conference with Senatorial leaders of both parties in a last desperate effort to win support for the changes in the neutrality laws which Secretary Hull formulated and the President urged on Congress.

The Senatorial leaders of both parties, the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Foreign Affairs committee and the Vice-President himself, sat with the President and the Secretary of State for three hours while Mr. Roosevelt told them, and Mr. Hull confirmed, the reports from American Ambassadors in Europe about the danger in the international situation.

The Senatorial conferees were adament in their refusal to accept the President's point of view. Senator Borah went so far as to say that he could not accept the Administration's statements of the gravity of the situation, for he had contrary information from sources he considered equally trustworthy.

The Vice-President asked each Senator present whether there was any chance of getting the Neutrality act amended, and all gave a unanimous answer.

Upset by Outcome

There is little doubt that the President was upset by the outcome of that conference, which closed with his declaration that he would see to it that the country understood that the responsibility rested on Congress.

One result of the President's failure to obtain the changes he asked in the Neutrality Act is a change in his plans for a trip to the West after adjournment. Originally he had intended to go to

N. Y. Tax Proves Gold Mine For Peddlers

PARAMUS, N. J. — Impromptu salesmen peddle cartons of popular-priced cigarettes to those who would beat the New York State tax of two cents a package recently added to the one-cent city relief tax. Because of the hazard represented by the line-up of these stands on this road, chief artery to the George Washington bridge through Bergen County, county police had to curb the activities of the peddlers as a traffic safety measure.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

By Frank Parker Stockbridge

SECURITY . . . . . daring

I don't know who first coined the phrase "Safety First", but I feel that he did the young people of America a disservice. Too many of them have grown up taking that slogan seriously, as a sound working principle of life.

Safety of others ought, of course, to be everybody's first consideration, but I sometimes think we are becoming a nation of cowards by applying the "safety first" idea to ourselves.

Nobody ever achieved anything of importance who made his own safety, physical and economic, the guiding rule of his life. Men grow great by taking chances. Nations prosper and increase in wealth and power precisely in proportion to the extent to which their people are ready and willing to take risks.

The word "security" is on everybody's tongue these days, as if it were possible for anyone to achieve security for himself or for Government to confer it upon him. That notion is what the "safety first" idea has grown into. If it took possession of everybody, nobody would get anywhere. To me it seems a better way of life to dare to take one's own chances of winning or losing.

LANDMARKS . . . . value

Up in my old county of Western Massachusetts a good many people are protesting the destruction of an ancient tavern which has stood for more than a century on the boundary line between Massachusetts and New York.

The old State Line House was built beside the primitive Indian trail, which later become a stage road, then the route of the east-west railroads, because it was the easiest pass across the Taconic mountains. Now a four-lane concrete motor road is going through the pass, and the old inn has to come down.

I can't share the grief over the demolition of the dilapidated structure merely because it is old. It has no beauty worth preserving, and no historical significance. Better a fine modern highway than an old frame house that has outlived its usefulness.

The value of ancient landmarks lies in the tradition which they enshrine. If those embody the spirit of the pioneers who made America great, then they should be preserved. The only part of the past that concerns us of the present, and those who come after us, is the spiritual inheritance left by the Founding Fathers.

CAMPHOR . . . . . Japan

The uses of camphor are so widespread that Japan, which has practically a monopoly on the production of natural camphor, used to take in a hundred million dollars a year or more from selling the rest of the world the white crystals distilled from the sap of the camphor trees which grow on the island of Formosa.

When the price of camphor went up to $3.65 a pound, in 1920, American chemists got busy and found that they could make camphor from turpentine or pine oil to sell for less than fifty cents a pound. Now one Florida company makes quantities of camphor from old pine stumps and the great DuPont chemical works makes it from turpentine.

To add to the distress of the Japanese, who have lost their camphor market new synthetic fibers which are stronger and softer than silk are now being manufactured in America, thus promising to kill off the last remaining important source of revenue of Japan.

Nations can't fight without money. Japan is broke and can't keep on very long trying to conquer China when it has nothing left to sell to the rest of the world.

Penn Yan—David Wilson, treasurer of the Thompson Memorial Hospital at Canandaigua, was short $16,420 in his accounts when auditors checked the books. Mr. Wilson resigned.

Yatesville — Fred Thomas' hand became caught in a hay fork and carried him to the top of the barn before he could be released. Tips of two fingers were amputated.

Dairy, Potato Tours August Farm Events

The two big events of the summer program of the Steuben County Farm Bureau are to be held in August, the dairy tour on the 11th and the potato tour on the 22nd.

The theme of the dairy tour is, "Low Cost Production" and visits will be made to the farms of Ed Wetmiller and Vincent Kurtz of Cohocton, members of the Northwestern Dairy Herd Improvement Association, each of whom feed their dairies largely on home grown products.

Soybeans for silage and for grain, fertilized meadows, sweet clover pasture and grass silage are some of the things to be seen at these farms.

Feature of the tour will be a chevon bar-b-que and an inspection of the famous Don Allen goat herd of Wayland.

Included in the schedule of the potato tour are the variety tests on the Leonard Drake farm at Prattsburg, the rotation and fertilized experiments at the C. D. Wolcott farm, Cohocton, and the farm operated by Maine growers near Atlanta.

Anticipating a large attendance at both these events, arrangements are being made for a public address system to attend the tours.

Posted Land Signs Are Legalized by Statute

Legality of signs posted on farms warning against trespassing for hunting and fishing is established under the Stokes bill passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Lehman.

Early last spring New York State farmers who had posted their lands, were astounded to learn that a lawyer had found a loophole in the law.

While the law specified that the signs must be at least 11 inches square, a lawyer had interpreted this as meaning that the printing on the signs must be 11 inches square. An expense amounting to thousands of dollars for the purchase of new signs was indicated.

To meet the situation, the Stokes Bill was introduced. It provides:

1. That signs already posted which are at least 11 inches square are legal.

2. That where missing or illegible signs are replaced, or in putting up signs for the first time, the sign in addition to being 11 inches square, must have printing matter on it occupying at least 80 square inches of space.

The signs must be posted along the entire boundary of a farm, one on every corner and along the boundary at a distance not greater than 40 rods. Notice must bear the name and address of the person posting the land, must warn all persons against hunting, trapping or fishing on the land.

To continue having a farm legally posted, missing and illegible signs must be replaced once each year during the months of March, July, August or September.

August is Month to Store Summer's Food for Winter

August is the month to store summer's food for winter's use. Perhaps the thriftiest canning is done when small surpluses are canned day by day. Garden fruits and vegetables are often wasted because a surplus of a quart or two is considered too small an amount to can. Homemakers, too, should store the sunshine vitamin by treating the skin to a judicious amount of sunlight daily. Sunlight that falls on a hat or other clothing does not count.

Dairy Notes

Many dairy farms have suffered badly from drouth this summer. In addition to a shortage of hay for barn feeding this winter, dairymen lack enough feed in pastures and other roughages to properly feed all of their stock. For them, it will be profitable to cull cows undesirable because of age, lack of ability or disease. Continue to feed well the good cows and growing heifers, rather than to underfeed them to carry along the unprofitable cows.

Flower Gardens

This is the month for flower gardeners to transplant and divide Oriental poppies, lupines, iris, bleeding heart and other early summer flowering perennials. Trim back the plants and remove the seed pods. Make cuttings of geraniums, coleus and other plants that are wanted for use indoors or to carry over for next year's garden. This is the time, also, to complete the grading for the new lawn, and to consult garden literature for new shrubs and perennials for 1940.

Poultry

Pullets hatched in March come into production this month. The work includes housing the pullets comfortably; half-fill the house with carefully graded pullets, feed green food, use mash and scratch grain hoppers in the laying pen, and feed all the mash and scrotch grain in these hoppers. Guard against certain evils. Darken the nests or supply each pullet with hen specs to prevent pick-outs and feather picking. Visit the pullets after dusk to make sure they are roosting instead of huddling on the floor. Close the nests at night and open them in the morning.

Community Buildings

If you and your neighbors are planning a community building for civic meetings, social and recreational events, you will find helpful the bulletin "Community Buildings for Farm Families". Write to your county agricultural agent for Farmer's Bulletin 1804. Many communities are also thinking about the organization of a fire district to protect farm property.

The calendar shows many events of interest to farmers, homemakers and rural youth. Here is a partial list: August 3 to 5, conference at Cornell on "Facing the Problems of Youth"; August 15, forestry field day for southern tier counties at the Arnot forest, south of Ithaca, between Van Etten and Swartwood; August 16, Four-H Club baseball day at Cooperstown; August 18, summer meeting of the State Horticultural Society at Cornell; August 26 to September 9, New York State Fair at Syracuse.

Columnist Tells of Artistic Interest of Tom J. Watson

Edwin C. Hill, columnist who writes the feature, "The Human Side of the News", had an interesting article recently on Thomas J. Watson. Much has been written about Mr. Watson in connection with his great business career, but the column in question dealt with the former Steuben County man's patronage of art.

It seems that Mr. Watson conceived the idea of getting a sample painting from every country of importance in the world to encourage artists. To secure the paintings he used the personnel of his own favorite company, the International Business Machine Corporation, of which he is president. With branch offices scattered all over the globe the business tycoon was able to gather paintings from 79 lands and these are on exhibition in the Worlds Fair building of I. B. M. at New York.

Few local people probably realize that Mr. Watson, who is reputed to be the highest paid executive in the world, sprang from this locality. He was born in Campbell and moved to the Clendenning Creek'-penhroad on the Clendenna Creek above Addison when a young boy. Mrs. D. H. Orr taught school in the district where young Tom lived and she implanted in him the ambition to go further in his education than the three R's. He attended the Addison Free Academy and later took a business course in Elmira. That his career has many sides in addition to the accumulation of wealth can be gleaned from the fact he scoured the seven seas to bring paintings to enrich the exhibit of I. B. M. at the fair.

Are you helping the workers in our circulation drive? Some of these people are raising money for very good objectives and a little help will be appreciated by them and of course by the Advertiser.

Attended a public function one night recently and it was hotter than Hades there and a mother came in with a baby wrapped in so many layers of clothing that the poor little thing could hardly breathe. Heard several women in my vicinity comment upon the intelligence of that mother.

—o—

There is some agitation on the part of Army engineers to eliminate the dam at the eastern end of the village. What a place that would have been during the past week with the flats drying up, for it would have been a stench hole. I hope someone can get to them before the dam is torn out next year.

—o—

To the Erie Railroad officials: Several complaints have been received in this office and by this writer relative to eliminating the bumps at the crossing at Maine Street. Cars driving slowly across the crossing are subjected to severe bumps and something should be done to level this off.

—o—

Minding the baby. That is the summary of what I tell some folks from time to time when they call upon me to go some place or other. I could get off and go with them, but somehow I get a kick out of being with the Little Rambler, listening to his childish prattle and feeling him crawling around me in his play. Before he came I sometimes wondered what the family routine would be like when he came. I felt that he might be an intrusion on time, upset plans, and the house in a manner to which I was not accustomed. Passing thoughts, but prevalent just the same.

Now that he is here, well, things are different. Things that seemed mighty important before, are now relegated to minor places. Things heretofore thought important be become secondary and he gets the time and attention that he wants and that I feel a child should have. And I'm sure that all the time devoted to him now will pay dividends later.

—o—

Addison's only successful gas well a gusher came in last week with a bang. But when gas officials discovered it they repaired the pipe from which it came and thus ended any thoughts of stock selling which might have been prevalent. A leak developed in a pipe under the sidewalk in front of the Advertiser and for several days a strong smell of gas could be detected.

Million dollar rains fell on this vicinity over the week-end and gave the farmers new hope and life that maybe things will not be so bad during the coming winter.

—o—

I wonder if the weather this summer has had anything to do with the lack of flies. Or maybe it is the way I see things, but there does not seem to be as many flies this summer as in some of our past years.

—o—

Guess I'll hie me off to Cameron Mills Saturday for the Old Home Day celebration. Attended my first one last year and while not a native of that colorful little hamlet, I sure like to hear the speeches, see the warm handclasps given returning sons and daughters and see the sports program. I had the pleasure of studying under two of the illustrious sons of Cameron in my undergraduate days.

The Rambler has gone back to kid days. It is partly a desire to play and partly a desire to reduce some of the overabundant waist line. But I've taken to pitching quoits, in an amateur way, playing softball and badminton. The result seems to be a hearty appetite and a desire for a good night's sleep.

—o—

Are You Guilty?

PROMISE — So help me! If I ever see a New York State driver stop at a stop sign in his own state, except when there is a car passing directly in front of him, I'm going to take his number and write him a letter of thanks and appreciation. From observation I would say that Stop signs in New York are ornamental. I nearly got hit a couple of times before I learned they didn't mean anything. Which is the reason so many drivers from our neighboring state get pinched in Pennsy for failing to stop.

A&P Sales Executive Lauds Newspaper Ads

Newspaper advertising is by far the most effective way to sell groceries to the modern housewife, T. D. Hamilton, sales manager of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. in Albany, said July 13 in commenting on the advertising campaign with which the A&P announced the opening of a week's sales campaign. The same day, five pages of A&P advertising appeared in newspapers in cities the size of Albany, Troy and Schenectady, and two pages in those of small towns.

"It is largely because of newspaper advertising that chain stores are able to make use of the mass distribution system to bring groceries to the consumer at considerably lower prices", Mr. Hamilton said.

"The A&P which is the oldest and largest chain organization in the country, is so sure of the value of newspaper advertisements that it spends $1,174,751 every year in New York state alone for space to tell its message. We owe it to our customers to keep them informed of market values, and newspaper advertising is the most effective means of doing this".

All the chains operating in New York state expend $21,200,000 for advertising, most of it in local papers, Mr. Hamilton pointed out.

"Space purchased to display the bargains offered in connection with the current sales drive is especially effective because these advertisements are real news to the thrifty housewife", he said. "We have found that when the customer is shown a fair price for quality groceries, she responds readily. The easiest place to reach her is in the newspaper.

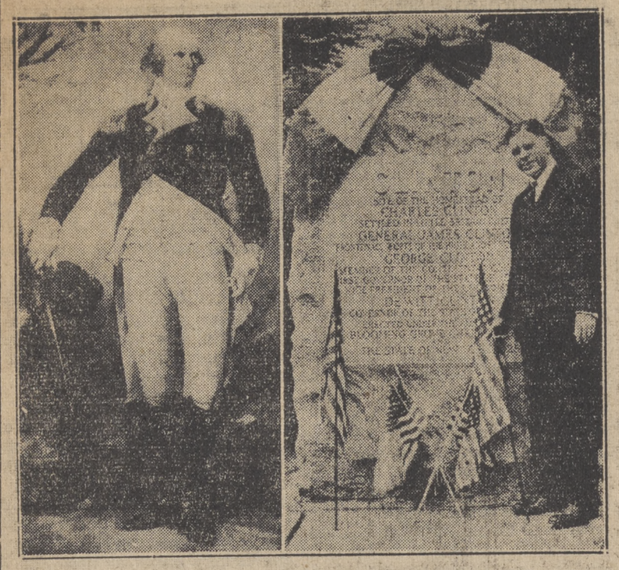
"Father of New York State" Honored



Governor George Clinton Bicentennial Celebrations Directed by Senator Thomas C. Desmond

State-wide celebrations of the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Clinton, New York State's first Governor, were held on Wednesday, July 26. Above (left) is reproduction of the famous Trumbull portrait of Clinton. At right, State Senator Thomas C. Desmond, of Orange County, who organized the celebrations, is shown placing flags at monument marking birthplace of Clinton in Little Britain, Orange County.

"George Clinton, known as 'Father of New York State', has never before received adequate recognition," said Senator Desmond, "because so much of Revolutionary War history was written by New Englanders or Federalists. Observances now, throughout the state, of the 200th anniversary of his birth enable us to appreciate better the outstanding services of this great patriot. This and every county in the state has benefited directly or indirectly from the services of Clinton, who was a Revolutionary War General; for twenty-one years Governor of New York State; and for eight years Vice-President of the United States."

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

What Are the Bugs?

H. C. B., Hartwick, writes: "I am enclosing two bugs, the smaller of which I found on bean vines in my garden; the larger oue was found in grass in the front yard. Is either one a Japanese beetle or the Mexican bean beetle?"

Dr. R. W. Leiby of the entomology department answers: "The two bugs are two kinds of lady-bird beetles. Both feed upon soft-bodied insects such as plant lice and scale insects.

"Neither insect represents the Japanese beetle or the Mexican bean beetle. The latter insect should appear in small numbers of garden beds sometime this month. Cornell bulletin E-206 has information on these insects, and a copy has been sent to you."

Says Oil Won't Burn

E. E. H., Brooklyn, has a request on fuel oil. He says he has received oil that would not burn properly in his burner, and wants to know of a good chemist who can test the oil.

Professor B. B. Robb of the department of agricultural engineering replies: "New York State College of Agriculture does not make tests of fuel oils.

"The chemistry department of the University advises that you can get the analysis you desire from Professor Olsen of the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute or from consulting chemists in New York City. Their addresses would be listed in the telephone directory".

'Glad' Growers Grow Sadder

A. W. Dimock

One of New York state's favorite flowers, the gladiolus, is facing the attacks of a destructive new disease known as "yellows", which causes discoloration and rot in bulbs.

Lightly affected bulbs, in field and greenhouse, may sprout and appear normal, but sooner or later the outer and then the inner leaves begin to turn yellow and die back. Frequently no flower spike will form. Similar symptoms may develop on plants from healthy bulbs when they are planted either in diseased soil or next to diseased bulbs.

Prospects for control are not bright, as the disease is already widespread and diseased bulbs cannot be treated. Growers can only be advised to become acquainted with the symptoms of yellows, to destroy all suspicious bulbs before planting, to plant on new soil each year, and to avoid susceptible varieties. Some varieties seem to be immune, and lists will be released as soon as available.

The disease is caused by a fungus which is confined at first to water-conducting tissues of bulb and plant. Infection may be by growth directly from these diseased tissues into those of a new plant, or by attacks through the roots of plants grown from healthy parent bulbs. In mild climates the fungus may live in infested soil for at least four years, perhaps longer.

Cottage Cheese in Cooking

Cottage cheese made from the curd of milk is not only valuable as a food, but it can be used freely in cooking to make other delicious and appetizing dishes.

Much of the protein of whole milk is retained in cottage cheese; thus, it is a good source of this important body-building material.

The following recipes for dishes which the whole family will enjoy are suggested by the New York State Colleges of Home Economics:

Cottage-Cheese Casserole

(Approximate yield: 6 servings)

¾ cup of medium white sauce
3 eggs
2 cups of cottage cheese
½ teaspoon of salt

Add the white sauce to the well-beaten eggs. Add the salt and stir in the cottage cheese. Turn the mixture into a buttered casserole placed in a pan of hot water, and bake in a moderate oven (350 F) for 45 to 60 minutes.

Cottage-Cheese Soup

(Approximate yield: 7 servings of 2/3 cup each).

4 tablespoons of butter
1 tablespoon of grated onion
4 tablespoons of flour
1½ teaspoons of salt
4 cups of milk
2 cups of cottage cheese (strained)

Heat the butter and cook the onion in it until the onion is transparent. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, salt and milk. Add the cheese to the hot sauce and stir it until well blended. Serve the soup within 15 minutes.

A three cent stamp is to be issued about September 25 on the 300th anniversary of the founding of printing in the United States.

....Hornell—Lee Dennison is a candidate for mayor here. Plans are being made for a big field day and pavement dance August 16.

Errors Costly To Merchants— Gang Mills Wins

Addison Merchants bowed to the league leading Gang Mills nine here Sunday afternoon in a Little Six game marked by a great deal of discussion and umpire baiting. Three base umpires were used before the game was complete. Two were asked to leave owing to poor decisions.

The winners topped the locals 4 to 3, despite the fact Addison made more hits. Poor judgment in the pinches and careless throwing to first cost the locals runs, but the margin of difference about tells the superiority of the winners, who handled the ball much better than the locals when the pressure was on. An attempted steal in the ninth inning by Root who was in a possible scoring position, cost the locals a possible run. Louie Dominick, pitching for Addison, held the winners to five hits, but they capitalized on them and on five Addison errors. The errors put Louie in a bad spot on three different occasions, when with two out, errors would put two Gang Mills players on the basis.

Score by innings:

Gang Mills	030	100	000—4
Addison	002	000	100—3

Lindley Old Home Day Attracts Large Crowd

Many people from the states, cities and towns gathered to observe Old Home Day, held at Lindley Saturday July 29. They were royally received by the people and committies in charge of the affair. Delicious refreshments were served at noon and at night, in the church dining hall, which was decorated for the occasion, in colors of blue and gold.

The morning hours were spent in visiting and renewing old acquaintances. In the afternoon and interesting program was presented at the church by several former pastors, and citizens of this place.

The program included songs, addresses by former pastors, readings, talks by prominent citizens of the town and special music.

The entertainment was continued into the evening and all left with pleasant thoughts of a perfect day, well spent, hoping to return for the occasion another year, for, "The hills are dearest which our childish feet have climbed the earliest,

And the streams most sweet, are ever those from which our young lips drank,

As we stooped to their waters, oer the mossy bank.
